

Coronavirus update

This message is for those who already have a reservation at our lodge, and for those considering booking in the future.

Already have a booking with us?

Our cancelation policy.

The Coronavirus is considered a Force Majeure (an extraordinary event or circumstance beyond the control of the parties)

We are not able to refund your 50% deposit, although your deposit is transferable* within 1 year of your booking date. *Subject to availability & any price changes

Considering booking in the future?

Our location in Bali is very remote in the mountains, we live in a small village where locals don't travel out of the country or far from home, so If you are living in a populated area, or subject to crowds, our remote location may be an appealing place to be to get away from people.

According to the best information currently available, although the virus will likely be everywhere, like the flu, most people are not at serious risk. If you're elderly or have medical conditions which, put you at risk, you're probably best off staying home and away from crowds, but for the rest of us, we don't believe the virus should stop you traveling, especially given the bargains that are becoming available.

All the best

Linda & Norm vant Hoff